

Today I Started Loving You Again by Merle Haggard

Capo 2nd fret.

[Chorus]

E                    A                    E
Today I started loving you again.
E                    A                    E
I'm right back where I've really always been.
E                    E7                    A                    E
I got over you just long enough to let my heartache mend.
E                    B7                    E
Then, today I started loving you again.

[Verse]

E                    A                    E
What a fool I was to think I could get by
E                    A                    B7
With only these few million tears I cried
E                    A                    E
I should have known the worst was yet to come
E                    B7                    E
And that cryin' time for me had just begun.

[Chorus]

E                    A                    E
Today I started loving you again.
E                    A                    E
I'm right back where I've really always been.
E                    E7                    A                    E
I got over you just long enough to let my heartache mend.
E                    B7                    E
Then, today I started loving you again.
